Glass Recycling Coalition Seeks Input for Third Annual Survey

Haulers, MRFs, Community Leaders, and Glass Processors/Manufacturers called to respond before September 1

ANN ARBOR, MI (August 13, 2020) – The Glass Recycling Coalition \(GRC\) calls on haulers, material recovery facilities (MRFs), community program managers, glass processors, and manufacturers to weigh in on their glass recovery efforts across North America before the September 1 deadline.

The annual survey collects aggregate data on types of glass collection programs, motivation for glass recycling, priorities, and challenges in community recycling programs. The data are compared to previous years' surveys and provide a real-time attitudinal snapshot of how glass is currently recycled, collected, processed, and where it finally ends up.

“We realize that glass recycling opportunities may look different in varying parts of the U.S.,” said Scott DeFife of the Glass Packaging Institute and GRC Leadership Committee. “GRC has been proactively working with communities to overcome barriers regionally, and this survey is another way we connect across the recycling value chain to identify issues and best practices throughout the country,” said DeFife.

The year-to-year comparative information also allows the GRC to identify trends and informs the direction of future GRC efforts. The survey is conducted online and managed by Resource Recycling Systems \(RRS\). Respondents will be asked to provide basic identification information like type of organization; specific contact will not be included in the survey report. The survey report will be published and shared publicly later this year.
